THE INDEPENDENT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CAMPUS

Early photograph of the Independent Presbyterian Church at Bull Street and Oglethorpe Avenue.

1853 This map of Savannah shows the original church site, with the eastward orientation of the church. The west end of the block remains undeveloped at this time.

CHURCH FOUNDING

Dedicated in 1819, the Independent Presbyterian Church at Bull Street and South Broad Street (now Oglethorpe Avenue) was the third sanctuary dedicated by the IPC as the congregation grew. Designed by the Rhode Island architect John Holden Green, the church is sited on the northwest tything block of Brown Ward, but addresses itself east towards Bull Street in the manner of a trust block.

"From grandeur of design and neatness of execution, we presume this church is not surpassed by any in the United States."

The Columbian Museum and Savannah Daily Gazette, 1819
